Living your best life

Always start with "why".

This is a practical course on how to become an effective director. Directors are functioning in an increasing complex world and by being a director you are, more than ever, required to meet your regulatory and statutory obligations.

It is imperative in today's highly regulated environment for any individual appointed in a position of trust to fully understand their duties, responsibilities and potential liabilities in that position to assist them in being an effective office bearer while at the same time being protected from potential personal liability.

Directors of companies in South Africa must ensure that the standard of conduct displayed by them meets the statutory requirements, in the absence of which, causes several repercussions not only limited to financial risk but also brand damage. For this reason, everyone must have a basic understanding of the regulatory universe in which they have to operate as a director or senior executive of a company.

What you will learn and how to apply it practically

Course overview.

“Governance and leadership are the yin and the yang of successful organisations. If you have leadership without governance you risk tyranny, fraud and personal fiefdoms. If you have governance without leadership you risk atrophy, bureaucracy and indifference.”

- Mark Goyder (Director of Tomorrow's Company)

Practicing good governance is important not only to be an effective board member but also to provide an additional layer of protection against individual liability. The King IVTM Report on Corporate Governance for South Africa was published on 1 November 2016 and became applicable as from 1 April 2017. A high-level overview of the principles contained therein as well as the relevance to any business and its governing body is addressed as part of this course.

Course breakdown.

There are five components to this short course, each with its own set of outcomes which you will master during the course.

Section 1

Setting the scene

The intention of this short course in Directorship is not to be an exhaustive source of information regarding the position of a director, but rather a high-level overview of the pertinent topics that an individual appointed or to be appointed as a director needs to be cognisant of to enable such individual to not only be effective but to also limit the risk of personal liability. In the event of any specific challenge faced by a director, specialised legal advice is required and should be sought by the director.

Section 2

The Companies Act of 2008

The Companies Act of 2008 became effective on 1 May 2011 and replaced the Companies Act of 1973 in its entirety, except for Chapter 14 of the old, 1973 Act (insolvency), which continues to apply in respect of the winding up of insolvent companies until new insolvency laws have been promulgated.

Section 3

Memorandum of Incorporation (MOI)

A company's MOI or rules are binding. In this module, you will understand the various relationships between the company and each shareholder and amongst the shareholders of the company. It also addresses the relationship between the company and directors or prescribed officers in the exercise of their respective functions within the company, between the company and members of the audit committee or any other committee of the Board in the exercise of their respective functions within the company.

Section 4

Corporate Governance

Corporate governance, for the purposes of King IV™, is defined as the exercise of ethical and effective leadership by the governing body that results in the achievement of the following governance outcomes: An ethical culture, performance and value creation, effective control and legitimacy.

Section 5

Different role players

Although it is correct to assume that the role of a director carries with it substantial power and authority, the flip side of the coin to also keep in mind is accountability and potential personal liability, whether financial, reputational or both. Complying with the law and ensuring that appropriate corporate governance is practiced in a company will assist a director in being effective and limiting the risk of personal liability.
